

For Immediate Release

Pittsburgh, PA – The NCBA is proud to announce that Wagner Photography will be the “Official Photography Company” for the 2009 NCBA Division I World Series. Wagner Photography has worked with the NCBA since 2002 at the NCBA Division I World Series as well as last year’s NCBA Division II World Series and the 2007 NCSA World Series.

Greg Wagner, owner and primary photographer at Wagner Photography, will be on hand to personally handle the photography. Greg’s specialization in sports action (with an emphasis on baseball) began in 1986 with the Chicago Cubs baseball fantasy camp. Although he has had the opportunity to photograph professional baseball as well as NFL and D1 college football, Greg much prefers to work at the amateur level to provide magazine-quality photographs to those who would not normally have such photos available to them.

Greg added: “I have had the pleasure of working with Sandy Sanderson and his staff at NCBA since 2002. The enthusiasm shown for the game of baseball by the NCBA teams and players is second to none. To be a part of each World Series and to work with the top 8 teams in the country is always an exciting and enjoyable experience.”

Each of the teams playing in the World Series will be photographed in action as the games are being played. The photos will then be on display at the ball park throughout the tournament with a Wagner staff member on hand to help with the photo ordering process. A wide variety of packages, posters and individual photos will be available. In addition, the photos taken at the NCBA DI World Series will be available for viewing and purchase at www.wagnerphotography.com . Rather than purchasing photos online, photos can be purchased at a cheaper price at the NCBA Division I World Series. More information about the NCBA Division I World Series and Wagner Photography can be found at www.clubbaseball.org/series.asp or by contacting Sandy Sanderson, NCBA President at Sandy.Sanderson@CollClubSports.com .
